EXHIBIT

[Editorial] The Criminality, Depravity, Inaction, or Malfunction of the Rule of Law in Memphis or in Tennessee

One of the fundamental problems in/around the city of Memphis in the county of Shelby County in the State of Tennessee is that the reality or actuality of the rule of law here in this jurisdiction are suspected to have or show criminality, depravity, inaction, or/and malfunction.

The legal education in terms of legal ethics has failed. The supervisory function towards the legal or judicial circles has been fossilized. Self-purification function within the jurists and/or the legal professionals is almost like a dream beyond reach around Memphis in Tennessee including, but not limited to the city of Jackson in the county of Madison County where Tennessee Court of Appeals is located.

A lot of the Memphians and the Tennesseans are in a state of torpor or lethargy. Or they are indifferent to, unconcerned about, uninterested in, apathetic to, or/and careless of the fate of this city and this State which is derived from the failure of the rule of law.

Nothing is free at the end of the day. It is a matter of time that the Memphians and the Tennesseans are going to pay for the price indivisually, seperately, or/and eventually unless they awake and open their eyes.
